

2018 Executive Rankings

This year, the capital market celebrated two senior executive who sold their companies for $9.6 billion combined. But the methodical director of a veteran kibbutz industry company who works under radar and without fanfare managed to wiggle in between them | Etti Aflallo, December 24, 2018, 08:11

12th place
Asa Levinger,
Energix Renewable
Energies, Final grade:
8.41

Asa Levinger

Photo: Amit Sha'al

How do you incentivize teamwork?

“By setting a personal example. In management, there are no shortcuts. You can’t demand something of an employee you don’t demand of yourself. True, at the end of the day somebody has to make the decision, but the people around you have to feel there is pluralism of thought.”

Who was the top-ranked CEO in 2018?

“Ofar Bloch, CEO of the Israel Electric Company, made a historic move this year: the reforms in the electric company, whose ramifications for Israel’s electricity market will only be fully appreciated several years from now.”

The Rules To conclude, a brief explanation of the ranking process: Calcalist is publishing its top executive rankings for the tenth consecutive year. We ask leading financial institutions to rank the CEOs of the companies traded on the Tel Aviv Stock Exchange 125 Index on the basis of four criteria: credibility, performance, transparency, and consideration for minority stockholder interests. We average these numbers to come up with the CEO’s total grade. Those doing the ranking are individuals who come into contact with the companies, know them up close and personal, and are able to assess their activities with a fair degree of accuracy. The Ranking Institutions: The banks: Hapoalim, Leumi, Discount, Mizrahi-Tefahot, FIBI, Igud, Jerusalem. The insurance companies: Migdal, Clal, Harel, Menora Mivtachim. The investment houses: Psagot, Excellence, IBI, Alumot, Halman Aldubi, Sigma, Analyst, Yelin Lapidot, Altshuler Shaham, Infinity, Mor, Meitav Dash